The people of Noel welcomed Jon Chachon, the new police officer to town. The ladies loved his handsome looks and charm, while the men were impressed with his war hero past. Not everyone was pleased with Chachon's arrival. Erica Gallo was immediately his target to be stopped and harassed, every time she drove through town. It wasn't long after the traffic stops began, Erica realized that Chachon had moved in with her vindictive enemies, Rachel and Coach Dillard. It became apparent the harassment was because of Chachon and Rachel's relationship. Rachel was not the only person willing to do whatever it took to destroy Erica, as Chachon finds himself getting pulled deeper and deeper into Coach and Rachel's plot. How far was Chachon willing to go to help Rachel seek her ultimate revenge? Why was he willing to jeopardize his perfect reputation and family for Rachel? College was in the near future for both Erica and Derek. Their love seems to grow stronger as they try to stay one step ahead of Chachon and also dealing with the fatal attraction one has on Derek. This 1859 publication contains the journals kept by Samuel Crowther (who in 1864 became the first African bishop of the Anglican church) and John Christopher Taylor during their respective missions to the banks of the Niger in 1857 and 1858. Crowther, a rescued slave educated at the Anglican mission in Sierra Leone, and Taylor, another Sierra Leonean, travelled on a trade expedition endorsed by the British government. Taylor disembarked at Onitsha and founded the first mission among the Ibo people, while Crowther landed further up the river, at Rabba. Revealing great Christian zeal and enthusiasm, both journals offer compelling insights into the daily life of a missionary in Africa and also serve as a valuable source of local history. The book includes the account of a canoe expedition undertaken by Crowther, along with a table of expenses for the trip, and a fascinating collection of Ibo proverbs compiled by Taylor.
